To give love for love and blessing for blessing is so manifestly a profitable exchange for man, that it entitles him to neither commendation nor reward. But the return of good for bad to our brother, this is the temper of soul which shall make us the children of the Highest. By a parity of reasoning, the giving of gratitude to God for prosperity is but signing a receipt for the delivery of valuables; an act of justice not of merit. The rendering back however of thanksgiving for chastening, the lifting up of praise from a heart that is charged with sorrow, the kissing the hand that smites, the recognition of a beneficent Providence in the hour of sternest discipline, this it is which is gilded with the golden light of God s favor, - for it is an exercise of that faith which works by love and is proved by tribulation. On this day, the appointed season of national thanksgiving, we are once more gathered in our houses of prayer to offer the sacrifices of righteousness beneath dark and frowning skies. We are invoked to give thanks to God even while our back is bowed and smarting; under the rod of correction. It is a sublime exercise of faith. Not but what there is still enjoyed by us a rich remnant of blessing, but so prone are we to exact the full measure of prosperity, that we sit down in discontent when the cup...
