Excerpt: . . . so fiercely, if I may say so, as to exceed all expectation and all provision. Resources doubtless will appear if it be Gods will that the great advance, which all portends, should now be made. Perhaps it is for this time that there have been kept back the great reserves of all. What has been lately pointed out, 1 viz. that among the liberalities--and they are not few--of the greatest and the richest classes, that cause which in itself is grandest of all, and has the most active relations to their own future in the world, has had their 1 See some curious and interesting statistics in the Church Missionary Intelligencer for May, 1886, on The Titled and the Wealthy: their Contributions to Foreign Missions. least support. For in passing we may say that now is the moment in which it is being determined whether the vast democracies which everywhere in the Empire are forming shall be Christian or half heathen; appreciative of the institutions of the mother country, or brought up to view them as selfish and obstructive. And on the answer to that question stability depends for all we honour most. In these days we have a home England, an island England, still. But e have a continental England, an oceanic England. 1 Our stations, our ports of trade, our factories, our commerce, far more than our arms, have transferred to us nations and kingdoms, and regions waiting to be made into...
